ROYAL LOVERS AFTER MARKIAGE. If one may judge from the following account, the married life of Queen Victoria's eldest daughter, glides on as smoothly as pos-

The little lady really loves her lord more of life, and there are many anecdotes in cir-"on important business," i. e. drilling and road Company to the firm of Fowle, Snowden, mandwring his brigade of Guarde; but he & Co, and shall further report whether there are had scarcely been absent a few hours witen any or what judgments or other liens against he was recalled to Berlin by a telegraph despatch from the Princess, begging him to respatch from the Princess, begging him to return immediately. He bastened back in the utmost alarm, fancying something dreadful had happened, and was quite relieved by her receiving him in her usual health and spirits, only stating, when questioned why she had sent for him in so violent a burry, that she "bad felt such a longing to see him again;" "and besides," she added, on her bushand's remonstrating with her for calling him away from his professional duties, mamma always telegraphs for papa when she wants him.

This reference to what her mamma does, day she put on her bonnet and walked across the street to ber father-in-law's, without even a footman behind her, to the inexpressible borror of her Obuhof meisterin, or duenna in chief, who exclaimed that no Prussian Princess had ever been guilty of such a breach of decorum. "But mamma does so at Oborne," returned Vie the Second, "and if mamma does, why should not 1?" Her affability and good nature have made her generally popular, though she almost raised a rethe female domestics should all wear caps. Now, the German maid servants are remarkably proud of their bair, and never think of putting on a cap for fear of spoiling their luxuriant tresses. Great was the commotion, therefore, when the Princess issued her orders to that effect; but the little lady was inexorable. "In mamma's establishment they all wear caps," she said, "and so they must in mine." Since the departure of way than she used to, the Queen being so decree in this cause. entirely taken up with attending to the King

THE PARTICULAR LAIY.

There is a coldness and precisi n about this person's dwelling that makes your heart shrink back (that is, if you have the least atom of sociability in your nature) with a lonely feeling, the same which you experience when you go by yourself, and for the first time, among decided strangers.

Everything is in painful order. The damask table-cover has been in just the same tolds ever since it came from the vender's she; eight years ago; and the legs of the chairs supplies of NEVASSA OR BROWN have been on the exact diamonds in the COLOMBIAN GUANO. drugget they were first placed on; by-the-by, do you ever remember of seeeng that same drugget off the carpet underneath? No. for she never has company; the routing, the untidiness they would occasion, would cause the poor soul to be subject to fits for the rest of her patural, or rather unpatural life. Though untidiness is a fault all people should avoid, especially the young, yet, for mercy's sake urge them not to be particular. She will

The particular lady generally lives in the kitchen-and an excreciatingly tidy one it is. The great parlors, with their crimson curtains, Turkish carpets, mammoth mirrors, beautiful mantels, and elegant paintings, are always closed. Nobody visits them; nobody enjoys them; the obildren tread on tiptoe to steal a glauce into them, their eyes expressive of wonderment and acautious air of dread. She is all the time dusting and washing and scrubbing, and scrubbing and washing and dusting. The door-steps, the windowsille and sashes, the wash-boards, must be daily scrubbed, though immsculately white they already be. The very knives, forks and spoons are rubbed thin and genteel by repeated cleaning. You can tell her crossing the street-she watches for every vehicle, and waits until it has passed a quare, for fear of being splashed; and even in dry weather she crosses on the joints of her toes, and holds her dress above her ankles. Her constant fidget wears the flesh from her bones and color from her cheeks. She never can get a servant to Ptay long with her. We never heard of but one "particular lady" who retained a demestic longer than a year; but then she was as "particular" as her mistress.

WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING FOR? A man was angry with his wife, either because she talked too much, or for for some reason or other, and resolved not to speak : resolution for a few days very strictly. One evening be is lying in bed and wishes to sleep; he draws his night-cap over his ears, and his wife may say what she will, he hears nothing of it. The wife then takes a candle and carries it to every nook and corner of the room; she removes stools, chairs and tablee, and looks carefully behind them. The husband sits up in bed, and gazes inquiringly at ber movements; be thinks that the din must have an end at last; but he is mistaken -his wife keeps on looking and searching. The husband loses patience, and cries, "What are you looking for?" "For your tongue," she answers, "and now that I have found it, tell me why you are angry. Hereupon they became good friends again.

Merchant Tailor, 67 King st. TIME GREAT SOUTHERN CLOTHING ESTABLISHMENT AS FLOURISHING AS EVER.—I beg leave to announce to my friends, in this city and abroad, that I am now daily receiving a large stock of SPRING and SUMMER CLOTHING, which, having been manufactured to my especial order at the North, I am enabled to guarantee them for good, durable, and well made Clothing, which I can sell at Northern prices, and cheaper than any other establishment in this city. Country merchants would do well, before purchasing elsewhere, to call and examine my well selected stock of Cothing, which I will sell at such rates that they again can seil them at Alexandria retail prices I have, also, on my last visit to the North, made arrangements for manufacturing Clothing to measure, at the shortest notice; which, for teatness, fashion, and durability, will defy competition. In the Furnishing line, I am supplied from the first manufactories, and am always kept posted as to the latest styles.

Gentlemen's SHIRTS made to order, and warranted to fit, or no sale. All I ask is a trial. Remember the well-known "Great Southean
